

ABSTRACT

An internal formation for a conduit. The formation has a longitudinally extending member adapted to extend along an inside surface of at least a portion of the 5 length of the conduit. The longitudinally extending member has an asymmetric profile in a direction transverse of the longitudinal axis of the member.